

2021 NEMA LITES Driver Profile:

Bradley Osgood

Claremont, New Hampshire native Bradley Osgood will make his foray into NEMA LITES this coming season. After decades of racing go karts, the 40-year-old decided to make to move into the most competitive asphalt midget group in the country.

“My grandfather was the head-starter at Monadnock when I was a child, so I’ve always been around the sport. I’ve been driving on and off for many years, mostly crewing on mini stock and late models. Recently, I started to assist Drew Eldridge, and he got me hooked on buying a midget for myself, and here we are,” stated Osgood.

“It’s a really competitive group, I just want to make laps and get up front. I think if I make it to tech a couple times this year then I’ll be pleased,” grinned Osgood.

“NEMA LITES is certainly growing, and with this large of a rookie class, we’ll have a ferocious fight on our hands for rookie of the year.”
